Collegium Augustinianum Prospectus

A 501(c) (3) nonprofit educational organization, the Collegium Augustinianum is an international research institute and Christian Ecumenical graduate school of philosophy, theology and classics. Inspired by the Augustinian tradition of “truth through love,” the Collegium Augustinianum is committed to the Christian ideal of love of others in welcoming students from all religious traditions. Authorized to grant ecclesiastical (canonical) degrees as a religious exempt institution of higher education by the Commission for Independent Education of the Florida State Department of Education, the Collegium Augustinianum Graduate School of Philosophy, Theology and Classics offers research degree programs in the sacred sciences of philosophy, theology, canon law and related disciplines for students seeking vocations in ministry and scholarship. The Board of Trustees of the Collegium Augustinianum is committed to the Tutorial system and the European approach to research degrees; therefore, it has not sought recognition from a U.S. accreditation agency.

Affirmative Action Policy

The Collegium Augustinianum is an affirmative action institution, and it is the policy of our university not to discriminate against any person on the basis of race, color, gender, religion, national origin, age, sexual orientation, veteran status, disability or any other basis prohibited by law.

COLLEGIUM AUGUSTINIANUM

GRADUATE SCHOOL OF PHILOSOPHY, THEOLOGY AND CLASSICS

Christian, Ecumenical and Augustinian

The Collegium Augustinianum Graduate School of Philosophy, Theology and Classics committed to the Christian faith found in sacred Scripture and sacred Tradition, with an educational philosophy founded upon Augustine's passionate search for God.

The following faith traditions are represented at the Collegium Augustinianum:

Anglican Church of Canada
Anglican Church of Nigeria
Anglican Church of West Africa
Baptist Church
Church of England
Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Episcopal Church USA
Evangelical Christianity
Evangelical Lutheran Church
Greek Orthodox Church
Italian National Catholic Church
Methodist Church
Old Catholic Church in the United States
Orthodox Church in America
Presbyterian Church USA
Roman Catholic Church
Russian Orthodox Church
Syro-Malabar Church
Unitarian Church
United Church of Christ

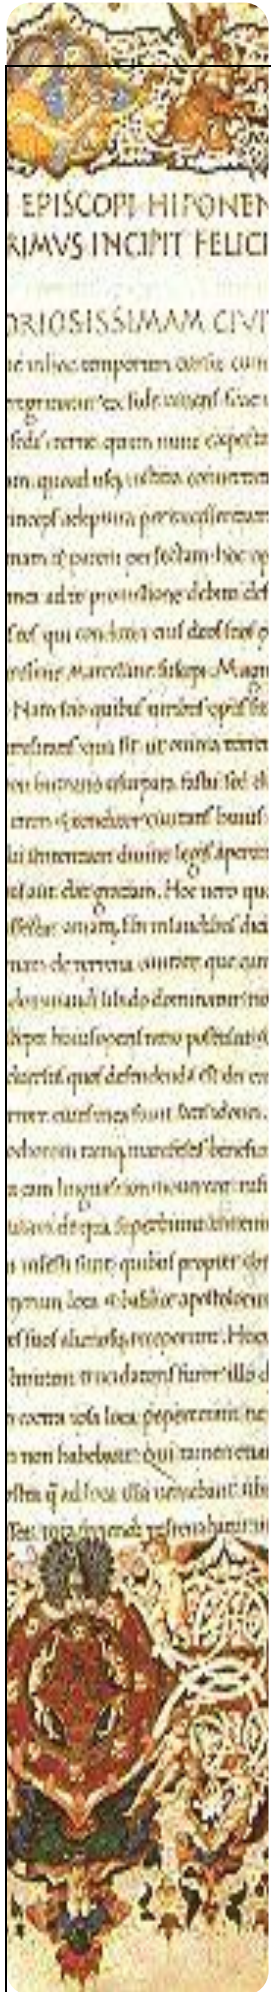

Classical and Cosmopolitan

The educational philosophy of the Collegium Augustinianum focuses on antiquity, and especially ancient texts, which can be studied from the point of view of history, or through a hermeneutical approach to modern texts that lead the reader back to ancient sources. Whether one takes the former path or the latter, ancient and modern languages are extremely important in order to properly engage the original text.

With an international College of Fellows and a global student body, writing and defending their theses and dissertations in many different modern languages, the Collegium Augustinianum is a cosmopolitan institution of higher learning unlike any other in the United States.

“Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts
And eloquence, native to famous wits
Or hospitable, in her sweet recess,
City or suburban, studious walks and shades;
See there the olive grove of Academe,
Plato’s retirement, where the Attic bird
Trills her thick-warbled notes the summer long.”

--John Milton (1608-1674)

GREETINGS FROM THE RECTOR

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to embark upon a truly unique educational experience; inspired by the mind and heart of St. Augustine of Hippo, imbued with the desire for a more traditional way of study and dedicated to the noble, loving pursuit of Christian community. These are just a few of the qualities that distinguish the Collegium Augustinianum in its idealistic vision and mission.

We are a specialized graduate school driven by the resonant voice of St. Augustine as it echoes throughout the major epochs of the Western philosophical and theological tradition, leaving its mark on a great many movements ranging from medieval scholasticism and reformed theology to phenomenology and deconstruction. Hence, the research interests of both our scholars and students touch upon the various ways in which the Augustinian tradition has helped shape and mold the sacred sciences to this day. For example, one of our doctoral students is working on the application of Augustinian Just War Theory to the contemporary problem of terrorist insurgency; such research demonstrates not only the vast historical and conceptual scope of St. Augustine's thought but also the great variety of scholarly interest welcomed at the Collegium.

We are quite proud of the scholarly achievements of our renowned faculty and the prominent role of our fellows in governing the academic direction of the Collegium. Our fellows are firmly dedicated to a reclamation of the professorial ideals of the medieval studium generale, promising a strong, unwavering commitment to educational excellence, as well as an old world mentoring relationship between professor and student, master and novice.

I therefore welcome you to enter into an educational ideal, a Christian community of scholars brought together by the common love of study for study's sake and the unifying fellowship that forges one mind and heart out of many; or as St. Augustine so eloquently put it, veritas per caritatem.

Patrick A. Messina, Ph.D., S.T.D.
Rector and Professor of Philosophy and Theology

Collegium Augustinianum

We are also a community of Christian scholars—fellows, professors and students—studying together, worshipping together and dwelling together as lovers of wisdom. Come join our community and contribute to our conversation!

Mission

An Independent University

In 1999, the Collegium Augustinianum was chartered as an independent research institute in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. In 2012, the College of Fellows established the Collegium Augustinianum Graduate School of Philosophy, Theology and Classics in order to promote a traditional and classical liberal arts education. Operating as a foreign corporation in Florida, the Collegium Augustinianum Graduate School of Philosophy, Theology and Classics is registered and licensed as a religious-exempt institution of higher education by the Commission for Independent Education of the Florida State Department of Education to grant ecclesiastical degrees for ordained and lay ministry within the Church pursuant to Florida Statute 1005.06. Since we are focused on the supervised research and writing of theses and dissertations following the European model of higher education, U.S. accrediting agencies do not have a mechanism in place for evaluating this traditional model of higher education founded upon the tutorial system and supervised independent research.

Christian and Ecumenical

The Collegium Augustinianum was founded in order to establish an ecumenical community of scholars dedicated to the advancement of the thought of St. Augustine of Hippo and his great Christian tradition of “faith seeking understanding.” As such, the Collegium views Augustine’s writings as a theological vehicle for an authentic ecumenism rooted in the Early Church and Patristic theology. Our community of scholars is also interested in Augustine’s influence throughout the ages—on medieval theology, Reformation theology and Contemporary Continental philosophy—and most especially on existentialism and phenomenology.

Classical and Cosmopolitan

The Collegium was founded upon an international “College of Fellows”—scholars of the highest caliber, colleagues with a common love for Augustine, whose intellectual life and accomplishments would attract serious students. Thus, our college would be founded upon idealism and the idea that the core of a university resides among the fellows and faculty themselves and particularly in the relationship between the student and the teacher. The Collegium deeply values the importance of the professor’s personal mentoring of the student and his or her critical thinking and writing about those texts that have shaped our world. Further, like the great universities that appeared during the middle ages, our collegium would be cosmopolitan in nature, with professors and students from around the world. As such, we value the importance of ancient and modern languages so that our students can analyze texts in the original languages and engage scholars globally. In fact, our students may write and defend their dissertations in several modern languages, including English, Italian, French, Spanish, German or Dutch. With such an accomplished and internationally-renowned faculty, themselves educated at some of the most prestigious universities in the world like Oxford, Cambridge, Paris, Rome, Louvain and Dublin, our students will have the benefit of a world-class education.

SUMMER CLASSICS INSTITUTE

The Collegium Augustinianum offers courses in ancient Greek and Latin in addition to tutorials by our residential Fellows for undergraduate and graduate students on the following topics:

Summer 2023

Greek 101

Latin 101

Homer's Odyssey

THE COLLEGIUM AUGUSTINIANUM

Our Intellectual Heritage and Foundation

Beginning in 1849 with the scholarly legacy of Mgr. Henri-Nicolas Sylvestre Guillon, Père Armand-Benjamin Caillau and Père Jacques Paul Migne, the Collegium Augustinianum began as a community of scholars dedicated to the thought of St. Augustine, the Bishop of Hippo and Father of the Church.

The Collegium Augustinianum was refounded in 1999 by some of the leading Augustinian scholars who formed a College of Fellows to continue this great intellectual legacy and advance the thought of St. Augustine of Hippo and the venerable Augustinian tradition in Western philosophy and theology. The College of Fellows of the Collegium Augustinianum established research centers in Europe and in the United States, which originally included Tarcisius Van Bavel, O.S.A. (Leuven), Frederick Van Fleteren (Villanova), Craig J. N. de Paulo (Gregoriana), Roland J. Teske, S.J. (Marquette) and Vincent Zarini (Paris).

With headquarters in Bologna, Italy, the College of Fellows incorporated the Collegium Augustinianum as a research institute in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and by February 2013, our Graduate School of Philosophy, Theology and Classics was established with three graduate students in Florida.

In 2013, the College of Fellows of the Collegium Augustinianum also became shareholders of the historic Athenaeum of Philadelphia on Washington Square in Society Hill of Philadelphia, where the Bandy Collection of Classical Greek, Latin and Byzantine Studies was established as a permanent Collection in memory of our late Fellow, Anastasius Bandy, who was an eminent Greek and Latin scholar

Thus, despite our new foundation as a graduate school, our students enjoy a venerable intellectual lineage through our fellows, faculty and scholars that connects them with Augustinian luminaries like Tarcisius van Bavel, John J. O'Meara, Pierre Courcelle, Jacques Paul Migne in addition to Wilhelmus Luijpen and John Macquarrie who were among the first to engage Christian (Augustinian) theology and modernity. Further, the Collegium Augustinianum has conferred honorary degrees upon Carlo Maria Cardinal Martini, S.J., the late scholarly Archbishop of Milan in addition to Catholic theologian, Dr. Hans

Küng and Archbishop Dr. Rowan Williams. Having a world-renowned faculty in philosophy and theology, our graduate school has already been recognized for its accomplishments in education by official proclamation of the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in addition to educational organizations here and abroad.

Philosophy of Education

Inspired by ancient and medieval pedagogy, the Collegium Augustinianum is committed to a classical, liberal arts education founded upon dialectical questioning in order to elicit innate wonder and philosophic speculation rooted in the Great Books of the ancient Greco-Roman world and the middle ages. On the Baccalaureate level especially, our curriculum is essentially founded upon the traditional "Greats" (Literae Humaniores) course at Oxford University.

Our faculty puts great emphasis on primary works (especially ancient texts) and the importance of the original language of the text. We firmly believe that in order to understand a text, our hermeneutical approach first attempts to situate the work within its historical, philosophical, philological and cultural context. With this in mind, we endeavor to reach the conceptual origins of the text and its ideas by a critical examination of its terms, structure and propositions as we seek to discover the authentic meaning of the text and to understand its conceptual construction and philosophical genealogy.

On all levels of study, from the baccalaureate to the doctorate, our pedagogy is founded upon the mentoring relationship between the teacher and the student, as derived from ancient tradition. Thus, the professor leads the student or small group of students in the reading of the text at hand, through questioning, engaging the student to dive more deeply into the text. This ancient method of the tutorial, is the modus operandi whether the tutorial is conducted in person or via Skype conversation. In this way, the student and the professor not only form a bond in their common love of learning and of the works they study; but the student grows into becoming a colleague with the professor and his or her peers, by not only by entering into a deeper conversation with one another but also with the great thinkers of Western civilization.

Since most of our degrees are, in fact, traditional research degrees that generally do not have a residency requirement, our degree programs require independent research under the supervision of one's moderating professor who will also direct and guide the student in his or her Master's thesis or Doctoral dissertation.

As such, our students are from around the world, and we have a highly accomplished and renowned faculty who can direct research degrees from anywhere, making the Collegium Augustinianum a truly global university. Our professors have earned their degrees at some of the finest and most ancient universities in Europe, providing our students with all of the benefits of a cosmopolitan education and a venerable academic pedigree at our institution.

College of Fellows

Unlike other colleges and universities in the United States, the Collegium Augustinianum is governed by an international College of Fellows, which includes some of the world's leading scholars in philosophy and theology, and especially in Augustine of Hippo and Augustinian thought. As peers, the Fellows elect one another to its Body and to the Board of Trustees. All of the officers, professorial appointments, honorees and the acceptance of students into our collegium are decided by the College of Fellows.

Thus, the Collegium Augustinianum has restored the original nature of the College and the authority of the professorate to govern over itself, which has been recognized by the Pennsylvania Senate and House of Representatives.

The College of Fellows affirms that the integrity of our institution is measured by the academic credentials of the faculty, our affiliations and the accomplishments of our students and alumni.

Currently Associate Professor of Philosophy at Gwynedd Mercy University, Professor Messina's 2007 doctoral dissertation entitled "The Significance of Silence in St. Augustine" examined the hermeneutical significance of silence and its importance for understanding the Confessions as a whole. With Professor de Paulo, he co-edited Ambiguity in the Western Mind, Confessions of Love: The Ambiguity of Greek Eros and Latin Caritas and Augustinian Just War

Theory and the Wars in Afghanistan and Iraq: Confessions, Contentions and the Lust for Power.

Frederick Van Fleteren

Areas of Specialization: Augustine of Hippo, Augustinian tradition, Medieval Philosophy; Anselm of Canterbury; Philosophy of Religion; Ethics

A renowned scholar of St. Augustine of Hippo, Professor Van Fleteren has published countless articles, book reviews and books. A student of the renowned John J. O'Meara, Professor Van Fleteren taught for many years at Villanova University. A life Member of Clare Hall of the University of Cambridge, he is professor of philosophy at La Salle University. Currently,

Professor Van Fleteren is working on his translation of the third volume of La Vie de Saint Augustin: The Pelagian Crisis. Some of Professor Van Fleteren's other publications include the several volumes of the Collectanea Augustiniana of which he is the General Editor.

Office of the Chair of St. Augustine

The Chair of St. Augustine is the highest award by the Collegium Augustinianum, recognizing the scholarly achievements of the professor who holds this prestigious Chair. As the Chair of St. Augustine, the professor delivers an annual lecture, which is published by the Collegium Augustinianum. The current Chair of St. Augustine is Professor Frederick Van Fleteren, one of the most renowned scholars of Augustine and Augustinianism in the world, who has published countless books and articles. As the Chair of St. Augustine, Professor Van Fleteren is available for directing master's theses and doctoral dissertations concerning Augustine and the Augustinian tradition. Having studied himself as a doctoral student under the famous John J. O'Meara, Professor Van Fleteren's students will gain an impressive pedigree.

The Annual Lecture of the Chair of St. Augustine is held in October, at our Institute in Philadelphia. At this time, the Chair usually announces the doctoral students that he has accepted to mentor in directing their dissertations.

Prof. Frederick Van Fleteren

The Office of the Chair of St. Augustine also awards scholarships to those worthy students with outstanding academic achievement with a doctoral proposal personally accepted by Professor Van Fleteren. If a student is interested in submitting a proposal to Professor Van Fleteren, the student must first make formal application to the doctoral program of the Collegium Augustinianum. Once accepted, the student may submit a proposal to the Chair of St. Augustine.

Prospective graduate students should contact the respective Dean in order to make application to the either the master's or doctoral program. If the student wishes to write his or her thesis or dissertation under the Chair of St. Augustine, please mention this in the application.

COLLEGIUM AUGUSTINIANUM PARIS

In Paris, students may spend a semester, a year or two in one of the greatest cities of the world, working on Latin and French in addition to pursuing doctoral scholarship. While in Paris, our students enjoy library privileges at the celebrated Institut d'Etudes

Augustiniennes of the Institut Catholique de Paris. Our Doctoral students in residence at our Institute in Paris also have the option of defending their doctoral dissertations there. In Paris, dissertations may be submitted in French or English.

Our Institute also assists our students in obtaining the required visas and permits for residence in France as well as housing arrangements with families or in an apartment. At the present time, only doctoral students of the Collegium Augustinianum may participate in this program. In order to be accepted, the student must demonstrate a proficiency in French and advanced knowledge of Latin.

Beginning in the summer of 2020, our students worldwide will have the option of spending a month during the summers in Paris for an Intensive Course in French. Graduates of the summer French program will be issued a Certificate in French from the Collegium Augustinianum. The summer program will cost $10,300.00 (including round-trip flight, intensive French course and housing in Paris.)

THE REV. PROF. AND MRS. ANASTASIOS C. BANDY COLLECTION OF CLASSICAL GREEK, LATIN AND BYZANTINE STUDIES

Thanks to the generosity of Mrs. Anastasia Bandy, the Fellows, faculty, students and visiting scholars of the Collegium Augustinianum enjoy privileges to the former private library of The Very Rev. Prof. Dr. Anastasios C. Bandy, a protopresbyter of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of America and renowned scholar of ancient Greek Christian inscriptions and Byzantine manuscripts.

The Collection includes several volumes on ancient Greek and Latin grammar, philology, literature, ancient Greek Christian inscriptions, volumes and manuscripts concerning Late Roman and Early Byzantine antiquarian scholarship, and especially that from the Sixth century scholar, Ioannes Lydus, Byzantine hymnology in addition to several volumes on orthodox Christian theology and philosophy.

Professor Bandy's library was contributed to the Athenaeum of Philadelphia along with a supporting financial contribution for the benefit of the members of the institution and the fellows, faculty and students of the Collegium Augustinianum, which is committed to assisting in maintaining the Collection. In association with the Athenaeum of Philadelphia, the Collegium Augustinianum will host an annual memorial lecture concerning Professor Bandy's scholarship and related fields in order to promote classical and byzantine studies and to raise funds for the maintenance of the Collection.

The Bandy Collection is an invaluable resource especially for our students pursuing research and specialized studies in Greek and Roman Classics, Byzantine studies and the Humanities.

On behalf of the College of Fellows and Trustees of the Collegium Augustinianum, we offer our heartfelt and our sincere gratitude to Mrs. Anastasia Bandy for this extraordinary gift.

Research Degree Programs

The Collegium Augustinianum offers non-residential, research degrees based upon the European model of higher education, focused on individual research toward the thesis or dissertation directed by a professor in the respective field.

The First Cycle (The Baccalaureate Degree)

In the First Cycle, for the Bachelor's degree, the student focuses on primary (and original) texts in their original languages from the Great books of Western Civilization as well as the foundational works of philosophy and theology (depending upon the degree). Generally, a student is required to write six to eight essays focusing on textual analysis and various philosophical themes of the text. The Bachelor's degree normally requires a comprehensive exam and a Baccalaureate thesis. Every student at the Collegium Augustinianaum is assigned a tutor who guides the student through his or her studies. The tutor is a member of the faculty.

The Second Cycle (The Master or Licentiate Degree)

In the Second Cycle, for the Master's (or Licentiate) degree, the student is generally required to complete a minimum of one year of research followed by one year of writing the thesis under the supervision of a professor. Generally, the student is required to submit a research proposal to the respective faculty, school or institute at the time of application to the second cycle. The Second Cycle requires the successful completion of a thesis with a minimum of fifty pages, written under the supervision of a professor. Generally, when a thesis has been accepted by the supervisor, student is required to be examined on his or her thesis by a tribunal of professors who grade it.

Prior to the submission of the thesis, students in the second cycle are required to demonstrate competency in the original language and scholarly languages of their research, by successfully passing a language examination or by passing a course in the respective languages.

In some programs, or at the discretion of the Dean, students in the second cycle may be required to successfully pass a comprehensive examination, in written and oral parts, concerning various areas of one's discipline. Each faculty provides a basic reading list to assist the student in preparing for the comprehension exam.

The Third Cycle (The Doctoral Degree)

The Third Cycle, or the doctoral program, essentially involves research and the writing of the dissertation under the supervision of a directing professor. At the time of application to any one of our doctoral programs, the student is required to submit a research proposal. In accordance with university statutes, the doctoral student must present a formal research proposal to the Rector within two months of acceptance into the doctoral program that must receive approval by the supervising professor and the Dean of the respective Faculty.

Although none of our research degrees require residency, students are encouraged to visit with their tutors or supervising professors at least once a year during the summer for one week.

Prior to the conclusion of the third cycle, the doctoral student is required to demonstrate competency in at least two languages, including one ancient language and one modern language relevant to the student's research. At the discretion of the Dean of the respective Faculty, the student may also pass a language course in lieu of an examination. The Dean of the respective Faculty may also dispense the student from this requirement in circumstances of scholarly achievement.

Upon completion of the dissertation, and with the approval of the supervising professor and the Dean, the student may submit his or her doctoral "argumentum" to the Rector, outlining one's thesis, or theses, indicating one's original contribution to the respective science. Upon approval from the Rector, the doctoral student may register for the defense, which involves a tribunal of three professors including the director of the dissertation. Once the dissertation has been accepted for defense, the Rector and the Dean could invite a recognized scholar to participate as a guest Reader on the defense tribunal if necessary. At this stage, the doctoral candidate will schedule his or her doctoral defense in consultation with the Dean of the respective Faculty or Institute.

Upon successful completion of the doctoral defense, the defense is graded by the respective professors of the doctoral tribunal. Finally, with the publication of at least an excerpt of the dissertation, the doctoral degree is conferred. If applicable, the doctoral degree may be conferred with honors.

Faculty of Philosophy

The Faculty of Philosophy at the Collegium Augustinianum specialize in the history of philosophy, Ancient philosophy, Medieval philosophy and Existential phenomenology. The Faculty accepts theses written in English, Italian, French, Spanish, German or Dutch depending upon the competency and permission of the supervising professor. All students are required to demonstrate competency with the original language of the primary text(s) focused upon in the research area and respective thesis. The Faculty of Philosophy offers the following research degrees:

The Master of Philosophy (Ph.M.) degree in Philosophy

This Master of Philosophy degree is intended for those students who wish to continue for the doctorate at another institution, but may require development in research and writing skills. The Ph.M. degree also prepares students for canonical requirements for teaching at a seminary or other ecclesiastical institution. The student is encouraged to choose from one of the four specializations for this degree: 1) Patristic and Medieval Studies, 2) St. Augustine and Augustinian Studies, 3) History of Philosophy, or 4) Christian Existential Philosophy.

While the Ph.M. generally involves a year of supervised research followed by a year dedicated to the writing of a thesis under the supervision of a professor, this degree can sometimes be completed in a one year when a student is accepted in advanced standing, by dispensation, or by examination. Nevertheless, generally when a thesis has been accepted by the supervisor, student is required to be examined on his or her thesis by a tribunal of professors who grade it.

The Bachelor of Philosophy (Ph.B.) degree in Philosophy

The Bachelor of Philosophy degree (Ph.B.) in Philosophy is generally awarded after two years of study since most students already hold the Bachelor of Arts degree in some related field upon acceptance and matriculation. The student may choose one of the following specializations for this degree: 1) Ancient Philosophy, 2) Augustinian Studies, or 3) Christian Existential Philosophy. The student may also earn a certificate in Greek and Roman Classics or Greek or Latin, in order to further specialize their studies. The Dean may dispense the student from a year of research in recognition of advanced work or credit from a recognized college or university.

For students enrolled in the Ministry Formation Program, who are seeking the S.T.B. degree, there is a special track for the Ph.B. degree, which prepares the student specifically for the study of theology.

Faculty of Theology

The Doctor of Theology (Th.D.) degree in Christian Theology

The doctoral dissertation may be on any topic in theology; however, since we have a highly specialized faculty dedicated to the thought of Augustine, the Augustinian tradition and the influence of Augustine on philosophy and theology, the student is encouraged to either focus on Augustine of Hippo, or make some connection with Augustine and the Augustinian tradition. The dissertation written may be in English, Italian, French, Spanish, German or Dutch depending upon the competency and permission of the supervising professor. The doctoral program usually takes between two and four years to complete, depending upon the student. As with most of our degrees, the doctoral program in theology is a non-residential, research degree under the supervision of a directing professor.

The Master of Theology (Th.M.) degree in Christian Theology

This degree has three specializations: 1) Historical Theology, 2) Patristic Theology and 3) Systematic Theology, which normally requires two years, a year of supervised research followed by a year dedicated to the writing of the thesis.

While the Licentiate generally involves a year of supervised research followed by a year dedicated to the writing of a thesis under the supervision of a professor, this degree can sometimes be completed in a one year when a student is accepted in advanced standing, by dispensation, or by examination. Nevertheless, generally when a thesis has been accepted by the supervisor, student is required to be examined on his or her thesis by a tribunal of professors who grade it.

The Bachelor of Theology (Th.B.) degree in Christian Theology

In order to pursue this degree, one must already possess a Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) degree or possess the Bachelor of Philosophy (Ph.B.) degree. This degree provides a foundation in theological sources, and it requires a minimum of eight papers and a Baccalaureate thesis at the end of the program. Advanced standing can be awarded by the Dean.

For those seeking ordination within the Old Catholic Church in the United States or within the Anglican Communion or its Continuum, postulants are generally enrolled in the Ministry Formation Program, which provides spiritual formation along with liturgical and sacramental praxis.

Faculty of Canon Law

The Faculty of Canon Law provides graduate education in the Canon Law and Canonical Jurisprudence, specifically applicable for the Churches of the Old Catholic Confederation, the Churches of the Anglican Communion and especially the Episcopal Church of the United States. The canonical Licentiate in Canon Law (J.C.L.) degree provides the necessary and professional credential for the practice of Canon Law in these ecclesial traditions, preparing the student to practice Canon Law in the above Churches, to serve in various capacities including Chancellor, Vice Chancellor, Judicial Vicar, Tribunal Judge, Canonical Advocate for bishops and priests involved in canonical trials, etc.

The Doctor of Canon Law (J.C.D.) degree in Canon Law and Jurisprudence

The doctoral program in Canon Law and Jurisprudence generally takes a minimum of two years, including at least one year of research and one year to write the dissertation under the supervision of a professor. The dissertation may focus on any area of canon law, including the history of canon law, any historical topic related to canon law, or problems in the canon law of the Church with respect to the Roman Catholic, Old Catholic or Anglican (Episcopal) Code of Canon Law.

The Licentiate in Canon Law (J.C.L.) degree in Canon Law and Jurisprudence

This degree is generally a two year degree program, except for those students already holding a degree in civil law such as the J.D. degree or the LL.B. degree who are accepted with advanced standing. The Student may declare a specialization in one of the following areas: 1) Canonical Advocacy, 2) Canon Law of the Episcopal Church, or 3) Canon Law of the Old Catholic Church.

Requirements for acceptance into the Licentiate in Canon Law degree program: A student who already holds a Bachelor's degree in either philosophy or theology will be an ideal candidate. A student with a law degree will receive advanced standing, reducing the time of the program to one academic year. However, such students will generally be required to complete a reading list in philosophy and theology at the discretion of the Dean. Students without a philosophy or theology background will be required to work with a mentor on special topics in these fields before moving onto research and writing for the Licentiate.

Institute of Classical and Christian Humanities

The Institute concentrates on the study of the ancient Greco-Roman world, history, literature and culture and its intersection with ancient Christian sources, including patristic and byzantine texts. The student may also pursue connections between Christian theology and the humanities, such as literature, history, art history, music, film and liturgy among other disciplines of interest to the faculty and the student.

Ministry Formation Program

Students studying for ministry and ordination within the Old Catholic Church in the United States or for the Anglican Communion or Churches in the Anglican Continuum may wish to enroll our intensive Ministry Formation Program, which supplements a seminarian's academic study with priestly formation involving Old-Catholic moral theology, sacramentology, canon law, spirituality, liturgical and sacramental praxis.

In order for a student to enroll in this program, he or she must be registered in an academic program, working toward a canonical degree in philosophy, theology and/or canon law.

Dresden, Germany

Study Abroad Program

Our new Study Abroad program in Dresden, Germany is available for all Collegium Augustinianum students as well as visiting undergraduate and graduate students alike. During an academic semester or year, the student can design his or her own Study Abroad program, which can either focus on 1) German Language and Culture or 2) Philosophy and Theology (taught in German) at any one of our affiliate universities or theological institutes in Dresden, Germany. Our highly-capable and distinguished Director, George Johns, who holds a Master's degree in German from West Virginia University, has been living and teaching in Germany for almost twenty years. George picks up our students at the airport, immediately takes the new group on a three-day tour of Germany, then assists all of the students with their housing arrangements, visas, permits, registration at the university, etc., and he is available to our students for whatever assistance they may require during their residence abroad. George is also the Director of our

Institute for German Language and Culture, and he conducts our German language classes at TU Dresden that range from beginner to advanced. For students of the Collegium Augustinianum, all of the credits earned abroad are transferable, which will appear on the transcript as "Work completed at TU Dresden."

The Collegium Augustinianum will also assist visiting students who participate in our Dresden Study Abroad program in communicating and translating their transcripts for credit at their home institutions. Otherwise, the Collegium Augustinianum will award its own Certificate in German Studies or Certificate in Philosophical and Theological Studies along with our own transcript if the student so desires.

The current total cost of a semester abroad is $12,500.00, which includes round-trip flight, housing (usually a room in a German family's home) German language courses, university registration, guided tour of Germany and whatever assistance our Director abroad can provide. The total cost of an academic year abroad is $24,000.00, which includes all of the above.

If you are interested in the Study Abroad program, please contact the Study Abroad Office at the Collegium Augustinianum at 1-800-248-1836 or email us at studyabroad@augustinianum.us.

A FEW OF OUR ILLUSTRIOUS HONORARY ALUMNI

Archbishop Dr. Rowan D. Williams, former Archbishop of Canterbury and renowned Anglican theologian. Currently, Lord Williams of Oystermouth is the Master of Magdalene College at Cambridge University. Archbishop Williams holds the Doctor Divinitatis degree, honoris causa, from the Collegium Augustinianum.

The Rev. Prof. Dr. Hans Küng is a Swiss Roman Catholic priest and renowned theologian. He is President of the Foundation for a Global Ethic (Stiftung Weltethos). He is perhaps most notable for his rejection of the doctrine of papal infallibility and his calls for reform of the Church. Professor Küng holds the Doctor Divinitatis degree, honoris causa, from the Collegium Augustinianum.

The late Cardinal Carlo Maria Martini, S.J., former Archbishop of Milan and renowned theologian, Scripture scholar and former Rector of the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome, was also highly regarded for his pastoral achievements and his ardent concern for justice. Cardinal Martini holds the Doctor Divinitatis degree from the Collegium Augustinianum.

Scholarships and Graduate Assistantships

Full and Partial Tuition Remission

Scholarships are available for students with financial need.

In some instances, professors are seeking graduate assistants for research, which are announced annually, for tuition remission scholarships.

Students may also make monthly and quarterly payment arrangements with the Bursar.

2022-2023 Tuition and Fees

The Board of the Trustees and the Fellows of the Collegium Augustinianum are committed to keeping our degree programs affordable since we firmly believe that one's financial state should not prevent the furtherance of one's education, especially in the sacred sciences of philosophy and theology. Therefore, based upon financial need and academic excellence, the Collegium Augustinianum will also award tuition remission scholarships, graduate assistantships and work-study scholarships. Tuition and fees are subject to change according to the most current publication of the prospectus. All fees are non-refundable.
